

The way we work ...

We work through exchanges, shared learning and by identifying and disseminating best practices and lessons learned from the region. Our activities are carried out in working groups with open participation according to specific interests and experience.

At present the Technical Secretariat of InterCambios is coordinated by PATH, from its offices in Nicaragua and Washington DC, with financial support from Sida -the Swedish International Development Cooperation Agency.

Who are we?

The InterCambios Alliance brings together people and organizations that work in different ways to prevent gender-based violence from a public health and human rights perspective.

We have been working since 2004, in collaboration with other non governmental groups, bilateral and multilateral organizations, and governments, to strengthen the health sector to response to gender-based violence in Latin America and the Caribbean

We aim to...

- Deepen knowledge about violence against women: its causes and prevalence as well as the effectiveness of different interventions.
- Advocate for better public policies in the region.
- Strengthen capacities in health services, disseminate best practices and create new tools.
- Promote the availability and access to materials and tools that strengthen the work in promotion, prevention and other actions of the organizations involved.
- Facilitate and support collaborative relationships and communication between key organizations.

Lines of action...

- Research, information and evaluation systems
- Advocacy on public policy
- Models for treatment and training
- Communication for social change
